MADE FLIGHT OVER THE TOWN

Aviator Eells Made Beautiful Flight over Gettysburg Surprising Local Citizens. Circled Over Northern End and College Grounds.

Flying rapidly and gracefully over town Frederick Eells, the Rochester aviator who has been spending several days here, gave Gettysburg its first experience in successful aviation on Friday afternoon. Mr. Eells' flight was unannounced and was partly in the nature of a tryout before his advertised flights of today.

Leaving the aviation field south of town about three o'clock Mr. Eells in his huge biplane soared high over town. He came in rapidly over the eastern portion and crossing Baltimore street, went out almost to Stratton and Lincoln avenues before he turned. Circling beautifully he took in the pretty North End and then went whizzing over the college buildings, sometimes coming down quite low and then going up again.

He went out over Washington street and, after flying for a little while south of town, he returned to the place of starting and came swooping down to earth where he alighted with ease and perfect success.

The entire flight covered about six miles and the birdman was in the air sixteen minutes. Hundreds of people heard the whirring of the machine and rushed out of doors to see what was going on. They saw the big biplane gliding along with apparent ease. The streets of town, the alleys and the yards held many people who watched the flight which lasted for a few brief minutes in any one section.

The flight was a complete success and gave the aviator a fine lot of publicity in preparation for his work of late this afternoon when he expects to go up again, weather conditions permitting.

Money for the undertaking is to be raised at the reunion of the Wertz family to be held at Harrisburg, October 25-27. It is expected that 1,000 heirs of Paul Wertz will be present.

The reunion will be held at the old Wertz homestead, founded by Jacob Wertz, head of the American branch of the family in the eighteenth century.

MINTER CASE IS HELD FOR COURT

N. L. Minter was given a hearing before Squire Harnish Friday afternoon on the charge of selling catsup containing saccharine in violation of the pure food laws of the state. The case was listed for November term of court after much testimony was heard, the greater portion being that of George L. Walker, state chemist, who examined the catsup in question. The hearing was attended by several town merchants together with Mr. Getz, of York, the manufacturer.

Near the end of the hearing the argument grew quite spirited when John D. Keith and William Hersh, the attorneys representing Mr. Minter, requested C. C. Linton, the state agent who purchased the catsup, to allow what remained of the catsup to be left here so that an analysis could be made by a chemist representing Mr. Minter. This Mr. Linton refused to do saying that, although he thought it a fair proposition, he did not like to take the responsibility upon himself.

Of the original contents of the bottle, which was produced at the hearing, possibly two thirds had been used by the state chemist in his work and the balance remained in the bottle. When Mr. Linton refused to give this over to the local attorneys without authority from Mr. Foust, the state dairy and food commissioner, that official was called by telephone and he in turn refused to grant the request but agreed to have a state chemist, other than the one who made the original test, and a chemist representing Mr. Minter make a joint test. Dr. E. S. Breidenbaugh, of the college, will be the local chemist if this plan is adopted. The catsup in question was taken back to Harrisburg by the state chemist.

Mr. Linton testified at the hearing that he came to Gettysburg as an agent of the Dairy and Food Department on July 24 and that on the following day he took samples of soft drinks at the National Guard encampment and also purchased the catsup from the Minter store. Information was laid against Mr. Minter after giving him time to produce a guarantee that the stuff came within the provisions of the pure food law.

This provides that if a retailer is found to be selling goods containing prohibited material and can produce a guarantee from the wholesaler that the goods were within the provisions of the law, suit should be brought not against the small merchant but against the one who made the original sale and gave the guarantee.

Much of the argument over Mr. Linton's testimony was concerning the whereabouts of the catsup after he purchased it. He testified at the first that he had placed it in a grip which he locked and then placed in the baggage room at the Eagle Hotel while he went to the encampment grounds. Later in the hearing, however, he stated that he recalled more distinctly the events of the day and that he had gone to the encampment before he bought the catsup and that he had kept the grip or handbag in which he placed it, with him all the time until he turned it over to the state chemist in the evening. Council for Mr. Minter argued that, allowing the original testimony to stand, the cats should be dismissed as it did not account thoroughly for the disputed stuff all the time from the purchase to the time it reached the laboratories in the state capital.

George L. Walker, the state chemist who made the analysis, told at length of the process which he had used and the finding of the saccharine, an artificial sweetening substance. Counsel endeavored to show that sufficient care had not been taken in the analysis to prevent foreign substances from getting into the matter which was being tested.

Mr. Minter testified that the catsup in question was among the goods he had purchased from J. B. Wineman when he bought out his store.

After hearing all the testimony and the argument of both sides Squire Harnish gave his decision, listing the case for trial. The state men were not represented by counsel and Mr. Linton conducted their case.

TOWN TO MAINTAIN THE PLAYGROUND

Methods of Providing for Care of the Playground are Discussed by Parent Teachers' Association, Other Business.

The question of the maintenance and care of the public playground which has been promised Gettysburg by Mr. and Mrs. William B. Kurtz, of Philadelphia, was the subject of discussion at the meeting of the Parent Teachers' Association in the High School building on Friday evening. The donors of the playground expect the town to take care of the place after they have fully equipped it, built a lodge for the superintendent and so on. Estimates of the annual cost of maintaining the place run from $400 up to $700 or $800.

It had been suggested by Mr. Kurtz that for the present it be given into the care of an athletic club or some like organization who could see that the grounds were taken care of until things were ready to be turned over to some other governing board. The sentiment at Friday evening's meeting was against this plan as it was feared that under such management the children of the town might feel some hesitancy about using it. No definite action was taken for the present but the president was authorized to appoint a committee to confer with a committee from the school board regarding some plan which will provide for the maintenance of the grounds.

Prof. Burgoon told of the visit of a state high school inspector to Gettysburg this week and of the delight expressed by that official when he learned that the children of the town were to have a place to play. The fact that the High School and Meade buildings have no playgrounds has always been looked upon with disfavor by the representatives of the State Department of Public Instruction when they visited Gettysburg.

The high school inspector here this week suggested to Prof. Burgoon that it might be possible to set apart a small portion of the Kurtz playground tract for school gardens, giving a number of pupils small tracts where they could raise vegetables.

The high school boys are already using the site for foot ball practice and, it is said, boys can be found there almost any hour of the day when they are not in school. Friday evening's meeting passed a resolution of appreciation to the donors.

The entertainment part of the program consisted of a piano solo by Mrs. J. B. Baker, a recitation by Miss Lillian Kitzmiller, a vocal solo by Miss Reba Miller and a reading by Miss Ruth Hamilton.

Those who attended Friday evening's meeting visited the manual training room which is now in use. Twenty benches have been installed with a large equipment of tools and the boys are taking to the course with much enthusiasm. Classes are held in the room every afternoon except Friday from 2:30 to 4:00 and the people of the town are invited to visit this department at any time.

PLAN TO REDUCE COST OF LIVING

Taft Suggests Land Mortgage Bank to Aid Farmers.

WORKS WELL IN EUROPE

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 12.—Radical legislation in favor of the American farmer and consumer as a means of solving the question of the high cost of living was urged by President Taft in a letter to the governors of all the states.

President Taft proposes to reduce the cost of foodstuffs on the American dinner table by reducing the cost to the farmer of producing his crops. This would be done by establishing in the interest of the farmer a financial machine which would give him access to all the money centers of the world and afford him credit at greatly reduced rates and upon more advantageous terms than he now receives.

The president recommends the enactment of laws by congress permitting the organization of national land-mortgage banks to be operated under government supervision, with power to guarantee and market the guaranteed debenture bonds of the state land-mortgage banks or co-operative societies is favored.

The farmers of the country pay over a half billion dollars interest yearly, the president says, which averages 8 1/2 per cent, counting commissions and renewal charges, against 3 1/2 and 4 1/2 per cent paid in Germany or France.

The complete development of our agricultural resources which this would make possible, thinks President Taft, would go a long way toward settling the problem of the high cost of living.

"What this plan offers," writes President Taft, "is a means to secure this country greater productivity at less cost from the farms that are now under cultivation, and, above all, to give our more farms and more farmers."

The plan suggested is based upon the principles of agricultural co-operative credit now in use in practically every country of Europe. Uniform state legislation, in the opinion of the president, is essential to the successful adoption of this plan, and he has invited the governors of all the states to a conference upon this subject at the time of the annual meeting of governors in Washington in December.

"We're not the interval so short," writes President Taft, "my conviction of the importance of this subject would compel me to invite you to a conference at a still earlier date."

President Taft bases his recommendations on reports submitted by the American diplomatic officers in Europe, who have, since last March, been engaged in an investigation of this question and upon the special report of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, who has made a study for years of the question of adopting co-operative credit in the United States.

TURKS LOSE FORT

Montenegrins Are Now Advancing on Large City.

London, Oct. 12.—The Montenegrin army followed up its success by capturing the fort guarding Tushli, thus opening the road for an advance on the Turkish town of Scutari.

The Turks offered a stubborn resistance, but the Montenegrins succeeded in rushing the position after several furious assaults that the Turks repulsed.

Both forces suffered heavy losses in killed and wounded. The fighting lasted over fourteen hours.

A dispatch from Podgoritzia says that the Montenegrin southern army, under the command of General Martinovitch, has crossed the River Boyana and captured several Turkish block houses at Tarakosch, near the Turkish town of Scutari.

Unless Turkish reinforcements have reached Scutari it is considered probable that the city will soon fall into the hands of the Montenegrins.

Florist Sues Boston's Mayor.

Boston, Oct. 12.—Mayor Fitzgerald has been sued by a local florist for the recovery of $3525.98 charged for flowers alleged to have been purchased in the ten years between 1901 and 1911. In the suit it is declared that flowers purchased on 285 occasions are not paid for. The amount of the bill is said to be $3224.63, on which the mayor is credited with $583.50, while the interest is set at $884.85.

ASTORS PAY $3,150,000 INHERITANCE TAX

Amount Charged on $75,000,000 Estate.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 12.—A check for $3,150,000 was received by State Comptroller Sohmer in payment of the advanced inheritance tax on the estate of the late Colonel John Jacob Astor, who perished on the Titanic.

The temporary tax was paid at this time in order to obtain a 5 per cent rebate allowed by law if the tax is paid within six months after the death of the decedent. This rebate is equivalent to $155,000. The temporary tax represents an estate valued at about $75,000,000, although the final tax will not be fixed until after the estate has been appraised.

The payment of the $3,150,000 is the largest inheritance tax paid in a single estate since the enactment of the law twenty-seven years ago, and is nearly one-third as large as the entire tax collected during the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

The preliminary tax on the estates of the other victims of the Titanic disaster, including those of the late Isidore Straus and Benjamin Guggenheim, has not yet been paid. The executors have until Oct. 15 to make the payment in order to benefit by the 5 per cent rebate.

SHOT BY CONSTABLE

Chester County Man Flees When Officers Seek Him.

West Chester, Pa., Oct. 12.—Fleeing from Constable Booker, of East Whiteland township, who had a warrant for his arrest, William Perkins, thirty-six years old, was shot through the body near Exton, and is now in the Chester County hospital here in a critical condition.

Perkins' ante-mortem statement was taken prior to an operation and will be retained by the county authorities in the trial of Constable Booker, who was arrested.

Perkins is alleged to have jumped his board bill, due Mrs. Hall, of near Glenloch. Justice William E. Lockwood, of Glenloch, gave a warrant to Constable Van Leer, who later handed it to Booker.

Constable Booker, learning that Perkins was at the home of a man named Brown, went there after dark. He says he had some difficulty in getting the inmates of the house to open the door, and when Perkins appeared and the constable announced that he wanted him, he promptly fled.

Booker fired, he says, toward the ground merely to frighten Perkins. He heard Perkins cry "I'm shot," and he came toward him, when he discovered a wound in his back.

HEARD BECKER THREATEN DEATH

Witness Says Policeman Said He'd "Croak" Rosenthal.

HARD BLOW TO DEFENSE

Declares He Overheard Gunmen and Becker Plotting Murder of Gambler in a Bath House.

New York, Oct. 12.—Lieutenant Becker and his lawyers were struck with amazement and their plans were disordered when Morris Luban, a witness upon whom they had depended for testimony that he overheard Rose, Webster, Vallon and Schepps plotting the murder of Herman Rosenthal and threatening to kill Becker if he interfered, swore that he heard Becker in the steam room of the Lafayette baths two or three weeks before the murder upbraiding Rose and threatening to kill Rosenthal with his own hands.

"I know it's the last of me," whispered Luban to a court attendant who had observed his trembling and his fright, but there was no tremor in his voice when he looked steadily at Lieutenant Becker a few minutes later and testified:

"Mr. Becker said 'If that — Rosenthal is not croaked I will croak him myself.'"

It was the most telling feature of a day that had gone steadily against the defense. The first witness, Thomas Ryan, a chauffeur, had blushed under the vicious looks shot at him by the gunmen at the bar and had said in a voice barely audible that he couldn't identify them.

Giovanni Stanich, an Austrian of good birth, cultivated manners and keen intelligence, had not been terrified by the black looks of the gunmen. He had looked full in the face of Whitey Lewis (Frank Muller) and named Whitey as one of the four men whom he saw shoot Rosenthal to death.

Then came Luban, fearful and shrinking at first, but gaining courage as he went along, and not only identified all four of the gunmen and Shapiro, the chauffeur, but delivered against Becker the first testimony connecting Becker with murder.

When he walked to the bar of the court and stretched out his hands toward the gunmen, their voices suddenly shattered the dead quiet of the court room. They railed against him. They mouthed and mumbled. The voice of Lefty Louie Rosenberg rose to a screech. He was protesting against the method of identification. And when Luban had named them one by one, save Dago Frank Crofield, whose name he didn't know, but whose appearance gave him no doubts—the retainers of the late Jacq Zelig had lost a measure of the defiance and contemptuousness that have marked them. As for Becker, the sweat was streaming down his face. He seemed to have aged.

Recovering from the shock of Luban's direct and powerful and wholly unexpected testimony against Lieutenant Becker, John F. McIntyre toiled for hours to destroy its effect. He labored to discredit the witness. He sought to bring out that Luban was a forger, a gambler, a ne'er do well, who had bartered with the defense before turning to the district attorney. Over and over again the lawyer drove Luban over the trail of his story of the Lafayette baths meeting between Becker and Rose and the story of the murder itself. It was all to no purpose. True or false, Luban's testimony could not be broken down.

STEAMER HAS LEPROARBOARD

Woman Infected and Husband and Five Children Quarantined.

New York, Oct. 12.—Health Officer Connell reported to United States Commissioner of Immigration William H. Flannery that he had detained at Hoffman Island a case diagnosed as leprosy, which was removed on Oct. 7 from the steamer Allemanina.

The infection appears in a woman forty-five years old, a first class passenger, who has with her a husband and five children. The family are Syrians, and the circumstances of the case are such as to make possible an exchange of communications between the United States department of state and the Haitian government.

According to information received in New York, the steamer was practically forced by the authorities at Port au Prince, Haiti, to retain this family on board and to carry them consequently to the United States.

RAYMOND WAS FINE PITCHER

When In Condition Eccentric Twirler Could Stand Any Amount of Hard Work—His Career.

With the passing of Arthur L. Raymond, or "Bugs" Raymond, as he was familiarly known to about every fan in the country, one of the most eccentric characters in baseball's history dropped out of life's game. Raymond, like that other eccentric twirler, Rube Waddell, was one of the greatest pitchers in the country, but refused to keep himself in condition. The former Giant twirler was found dead in bed in a Chicago hotel.

Raymond was a wonderful pitcher when in condition and could stand any amount of hard work. He was justly ranked with Mathewson, Brown, Rube Waddell and other pitching stars of his time. He started his baseball career in Rockford, Ill. He then joined the Atlanta Southern league club, where the eccentric pitcher made a wonderful record, pitching 65 games and losing but five of them. Baseball accounts in both the American and National leagues soon learned of Raymond's wonderful pitching. In 1903 Raymond was secured by the St. Louis Cardinals, and he remained with that team until 1908, when Manager McGraw pulled off one of the largest trades in baseball history.

Raymond and Red Murray, of the St. Louis club, and Schell, of the Cincinnati club, were secured by McGraw in trade for Roger Bresnahan. Karger and Fromme, two pitchers, also figured in the trade. They went to the Reds in part payment for Bresnahan, now manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, and formerly the star catcher for the Giants.

While with the Giant's Raymond's name was one to conjure with, and in the successes that followed the team after his advent, the loss of Roger Bresnahan was forgotten. A season of success was followed by a career along the Great White Way that spelled disaster, and once in the fascinating web of Broadway's life, Raymond never got out, except to drift into a lower trend. His eccentricities and escapades earned him the nickname of "Bugs," and it never was spoken in derision. "Bugs" was still loved by fandom and players, and his waywardness brought sorrow to the Giants.

After an extraordinary long debauch in 1911, Manager McGraw, of the Giants, who were then in the thick of a pennant race, appointed a member of the team to guard Raymond. Then it was "Bugs" Raymond, who has a keeper," that gave fandom another bit of gossip. Raymond went along well. He got in condition, and the Giants again started pennantward. Then "Bugs" broke loose again, taking his keeper with him, and the pair of them set Broadway tongues agog with their escapades. Raymond was dropped from the team's roster as hopeless, and from that moment he started the life of unceasing dissipation that was ended the other day in a Chicago hotel.

AVIATOR MISSING ON FLIGHT UP DELAWARE

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—No tidings have been received from Marshall Earl Reid and Lieutenant Commander Henry C. Mustin, both of Philadelphia, who left Cape May Point, N. J., for this city in Reid's hydro-aeroplane yesterday afternoon.

The government wireless service has been brought into service in an attempt to find the two men.

At Cape May it is said that the two men were kept in sight until they reached Lewes, Del., and turned up the bay. Their speed was estimated at about forty-five miles an hour.

While they were in sight the hydro-aeroplane rode on its pontoons, and not once did it leave the surface of the water. This is out of all accord with Reid's usual practice, which is to leave the water's surface after a short start.

The fact that the machine was not seen to fly lends belief to the idea advanced by Mrs. Marshall Reid, mother of the aviator. She thinks that engine trouble developed and said, too, that the men must have gone ashore.

No one at the New Jersey resort knew anything about the aviators except what they saw when the flight was started. Men in charge of government stations along the Delaware bay said they had seen nothing of the men. They expected to make the trip in three hours.

RED SOX AGAIN BEAT GIANTS, 3-2

GETS BRILLIANT SUPPORT

He Gave No Passes, Struck Out Eight Batsmen and Drove in Boston's Third Run.

STANDING OF THE CLUBS.

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Boston.....	2	1	667
New York.....	1	2	333

New York, Oct. 12.—The fourth call to arms in the gruelling world's series of ball games between the Giants and Red Sox, which took place at the Polo Grounds, turned into a battle which was only a degree less stubborn and trying than the other three. The Bostonians were the winners by a score of 3 to 1.

The Red Sox were ahead all the way. The Giants, however, gave stern chase. Held back for five innings by the Joe Wood formula of smoke and curves all the more effective on account of a dark day, the Giants never lost heart, and in the sixth and seventh innings they threatened a successful climbing of the Red hope's frame. The Giants grouped five of nine hits in the sixth and seventh innings, but the Boston genius of the knoll, backed by sharp support, was too effective for the unceasing New York efforts to reach the desired consummation.

The Giants did just what they did the first time then encountered Wood. They made more hits than the Bostonians gathered off the New York pitcher. Nevertheless the Missouri magician tried them sorely. He altered his system somewhat from the first game. He did more curving, he crooked the ball over the plate often than he applied straight speed.

Treasure was cleanly and smartly supported. He held the Red Sox to five scattered hits, scattered one at a time through the first five innings. Two of the hits were timely. A wild pitch followed a three-bagger and gave the Bostonians one run; a base on balls and a hit figured in the other. Had Meyers intercepted a steal one of the two runs wouldn't have been made, but Jeff was mostly to blame for both. When he had retired for a pinch hitter Ames came in and a base on balls off Ames also was associated with a run.

Big Jeff was getting better and better when he stepped aside. His control was better, the Boston players were falling before him fast.

The single error a side made no bearing on the scoring. A wild throw by Meyers and a fumble grounder by Wagner were the only misplays. Before he made that fumble Wagner had absorbed everything. That left hand of his shot out like fire and pinched ground balls in the fifth and eighth innings which, had they gone clear, would have put his team in serious predicaments. Fletcher's capital playing at short and a wonderful one-handed catch while in the air, and Murray also embellished the defensive department.

Wood helped win his own game with a hit. His battery mate, Cady, also towed home a run with a single. The heavy artillery on the Boston side, however, manifested itself in the person of Larry Gardner. A triple and a single by Gardner rang the knell of defeat for the Giants. The score:

Alfalfa grows best on a deep, sandy loam underlain by a loose and permeable subsoil. It will not grow if there is an excess of water in the soil. The land must be well drained.

English farmers do not hesitate to pay as high as $100 for a pure bred sire ram. Do you imagine they would do this if they could get just as good results from a scrub at one-tenth the price?

The high producing dairy cow is an animal that follows in the wake of civilization. She never goes ahead. Conditions must be suitable before she can be of any value to the farmer.

'620 DYNAMITE EXHIBITS

Exploded Bombs and Nitro-Glycerine Cans to Be Presented to Jury.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 12.—Pieces of exploded bombs, old tin cans in which nitro-glycerine had been carried, cartridges, fuses and magazine guns were put in readiness by the government to be used as exhibits in the "dynamite conspiracy" trial.

Assembled from many sections of the country in the wake of Orrie E. McManigal and the McNamaras, they have been classified by Clarence W. Nichols, assistant district attorney, and are to be used as physical evidence in the government's charge of illegal interstate shipment of explosives.

Six hundred and twenty exhibits have been listed. They are to be presented to the jury one by one, and include:

Two magazine guns, a rifle, fuses and alarm clock attachments for bombs, taken from the valises of McManigal and James B. McNamara when they were arrested in Detroit.

Fuses, alarm clocks and dynamite boxes taken from the vaults of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers when J. J. McNamara, the secretary, was arrested in Indianapolis.

A suitcase, made in Cincinnati for the carrying of nitro-glycerine, which Henry W. Leggett, now of Denver, is alleged to have brought from Pittsburgh to the iron workers' headquarters in Indianapolis.

Nitro-glycerine cans found near a portion of a bridge over the Missouri river at Kansas City, Mo., which McManigal blew up Aug. 23, 1910.

POISONED CANDY SENT TO CHOIR SINGER

Cincinnati Girl Victim of Unknown Enemy.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 12.—Through the agency of candy which had been dipped in poison, an unidentified enemy sought the life of Miss Isabel Sparkes, soprano soloist at Christ church, the leading Episcopal congregation of the city. It is at this church that President Taft usually worships when in the city.

Miss Sparkes ate three pieces of the candy and became very ill. Her life was saved by the prompt ministrations of the family physician. Miss Sparkes' sister also partook of a piece of the candy and was made ill.

It was several weeks ago that Miss Sparkes received the candy. City and federal detectives have been endeavoring to obtain a clue to the identity of the criminal.

Miss Sparkes has recovered, but she is in constant fear that some enemy might take other means of injuring her. It is pointed out that the aim of the sender of the candy might have been the permanent injury of the girl a vocal organ through inducing lockjaw, as the drug has that tendency.

WALES STARTS AT OXFORD

Queen Insists on Close Chaperonage by a Tutor.

Oxford, Eng., Oct. 12.—The Prince of Wales began his university career on Friday.

For a year he will remain at the Magdalen college in Oxford, living, as far as royalty can, an ordinary freshman's life.

King George wanted his son to "run loose," but the queen insisted on close chaperonage by a tutor. Except golf and rowing, his highness will be debarrd from university sports. Her majesty fears he may be hurt if he played rougher games.

After his year at Oxford, the prince will go to Cambridge to prevent the latter university from being jealous.

Wounded Bandits Rob Bank.

Muskogee, Okla., Oct. 12.—The State bank, of Council Hill, Okla., was robbed of about $2000 and the mounted bandits escaped after a running fight with citizens. Nitro-glycerine was used. The charge's explosion awakened three townsmen, who with their wives spread the alarm. Bullets were exchanged without result.

We do not believe our people are as thoroughly aroused over what is in store for them through the appearance here of J. R. Hemminger and his Australian pianist, Gordon Johnston, as they ought to be. There will be a two weeks' service in the Methodist church, commencing this Sunday, October 12th and continuing until Sunday, the 27th. It will be remembered that Mr. Hemminger was with the Chapman-Alexander World Tour party, and is a very able chorus leader. The co-operation of the churches is requested. Rev Mr. Watkins is getting a union choir for these services and a treat is awaiting the people of the community.

ANGELA DECIDES TO CHANGE HER MIND

By MOLLY McMASTER.

"No Philip," Angela's lips were set firmly. "I simply will not make up my mind just now to marry you. My literary path is beginning to unwind before me and I do not want it to get all tangled up with matrimonial duties."

"You have told me you love me, Angela," Philip Dorlan said gravely; "your decision hardly proves it."

"Angela flushed. 'I do not see why you should be so unreasonable,' she said with some heat. 'I only want a year or so in order to get my name firmly established and then—'

"Yes, then," broke in Philip with more dignity than hurt, "when you have worn yourself out burning the midnight oil and indulging in all the silly Bohemian fads—you will marry me. Thanks," he said somewhat bitterly, "I do not care to have my love tossed aside like an old glove and picked up only after your evidently greater love for writing has wearied you."

Angela cast a swift glance at this new, unfolding Philip. She had never before felt his power so keenly yet she braced herself against his love.

"If you cared enough about me you would be glad that I have other interests and a talent for writing," she said half in appeal.

"Not when the interests come before me," Philip told her with his honest blue eyes fixed unrelentingly upon her. "Nor do I want my wife to indulge her temperament so far as to work herself into mild forms of hysteria through her too vivid imagination. You know, because we have spoken frequently of it, that I want you to develop the talent which you undoubtedly possess, but I certainly do not want you to ruin your nerves and those of your husband, in its pursuit."

"Very well!" Angela burst forth with her nose very high in the air. "We will take no risks with your delicate nerves. Here is your ring! I hope you will find a girl who has neither a nerve nor an ounce of temperament in her whole marble body—perhaps she can make you happy! I have decided to be happy myself!" Angela turned and went swiftly out of the room leaving a trail of delicate aroma which was all that was left to Philip Dorlan.

He went out of the house and down the steps nor did he know whether he was walking.

"Hello Phil! She has turned you down, hasn't she?" It was the charming Evelyn Marsh who had blocked his way with her melodious voice. "Poor boy—and you do love her, don't you?" Evelyn had turned and put her arm affectionately into his.

"No," said Philip contrary to his sense of honesty. "No."

Evelyn Marsh smiled and a flush rose and remained in her cheeks. She drew a trifle nearer and unconsciously Philip's footsteps were guided by the pressure of her arm.

During the following weeks, and caught on the rebound, Philip found himself constantly with Evelyn. And Angela from her little studio at the top of the house looked down with slowly breaking heart to the captivity of Philip.

Because she had a sudden feeling of loneliness and because she had caught sight of Philip and Evelyn out there in the village street Angela called up Tom Raynor on the telephone.

"Can I change my mind about going to the dance with you tonight, Tom?" she asked when she heard Tom's voice over the telephone. "I do not deserve it but may I? You are a dear. Yes, pink—that is sweet of you. Daddy will drive us over in the car if you like. All right, by-by."

Angela rejoiced that her courage had permitted her to attend a dance at which she was sure to meet Philip and Evelyn Marsh.

She looked unusually beautiful in her delicate pink gown and with no ornament in her hair save one of the pink rosebuds that Tom had sent her.

When Philip saw her his heart gave a great bound. "May I have a dance—for old times sake?" he asked trying to hide his jealousy at sight of Tom Raynor's roses.

"Two if you like, Philip," she made answer in a voice sweet and without the strain of emotion.

When their first dance came Philip approached Angela with a slightly unsteady step. He put his arm firmly about her and when she was once more within the circle of his arm he drew a great breath of relief and contentment.

As for Angela, she only sighed softly. Because they had danced so much together they swung into perfect rhythm.

"Angela," he said suddenly, "I have come to the cross-roads. I want you to be your old sweet self to me tonight and decide something for me. Will you—dear?"

Philip's eyes were shining with a love she had never seen there before.

"I have much to decide tonight, Philip," she said quickly. "Some one is going to make me answer him tonight but I will be glad to help you if I can." Angela rejoiced in the quick clasp of Philip's arm as if he would hold her from any other man.

"I am either going to risk my life's happiness and propose to Evelyn or," Philip looked hungrily down at Angela, "I am going to risk another refusal from you. Which shall it be?"

"I do not think Evelyn loves you," Angela said shyly, with a deep flush glowing in her cheeks, "and I do."

On the Other Hand.

"It seems so strange to us, you know," the American traveler was saying, "when your people speak of the 'honorable umbrella,' the 'honorable teacup,' the 'honorable scissors,' and the like."

"Yes," said his educated Japanese host, "to your unaccustomed ears it must sound so much more absurd than 'happy accident,' 'grateful warmth,' or 'glad tidings.'"

Patron Saint for Stenographers.
Eleven hundred Catholic stenographers of various nationalities have presented to the holy father a signed petition asking that St. Genesius of Arles be nominated as the patron of their profession. St. Genesius was a notary or chancellor of the city of Arles, who, refusing to transcribe an edict of the Emperor Maximilian Heracles against the Christians, was decapitated by order of the persecutor. This happened about the beginning of fourth century.—America.
